Marketing and promoting your club

A guide for sport and recreation clubs and associations in Western Australia.

Sport and recreation builds stronger, healthier, happier and safer communities.
What is marketing?
Marketing can be defined as a process by which individuals and groups obtain what they want through creating, offering and exchanging products of value with others.

All sport and recreation organisations undertake marketing, although they are often unaware that they are actually doing so. Listing your club in the yellow pages telephone directory; placing information about membership registrations in the local newspaper; offering a discount on court hire prices to induce greater use of the courts; or redecorating the club facilities are all examples of formal marketing activities.

An example of informal marketing involves a person enquiring about joining a surf life saving club and the secretary being particularly helpful with providing the membership information over the phone. A mother of a prospective junior tennis club member watching a coach conduct a lesson with the children looking bored and not enjoying the session is a less positive example of informal marketing.

Who does marketing?
These examples of marketing indicate that different individuals within your sport and recreation club/group conduct marketing activities. It is particularly useful to appoint an individual or small team as marketing officers to oversee the development and implementation of your organisation’s marketing strategies.

Marketing tools
The ‘marketing mix’ or marketing tools an organisation can use can be classified into four categories:

- Product: Includes the quality and accessibility of the services the club or group provides, for example, competitions and social functions.
- Price: Includes the cost of membership fees and discounts offered.
- Place: Includes the clubrooms or the facilities where competitions are conducted.
- Promotion: Includes advertising of the club/group, a promotion at the local shopping centre or an article in the local community newspaper.

Developing a simple marketing plan
A marketing plan does not need to be particularly difficult to develop or the strategies costly to implement. There are many different ways to develop a marketing plan. A simple plan for a small club would contain some basic elements including:

- Objectives: Marketing objectives should be specific, measurable and achievable. An example would be recruiting an additional 20 junior members by the start of competition.
- Strategies: These can be developed around the marketing mix and must be targeted towards the specific target markets. Target marketing is the practice of designing and directing specific services at specific individuals or groups of customers. For example, if your club or group was trying to attract new junior members you would need to develop strategies to specifically attract juniors.
- Budget: A realistic marketing budget within the club’s/group’s capabilities and focusing on low-cost or no-cost strategies would be recommended.
Evaluation

Make sure strategies are put in place to see if you have met your objectives. Some activities are easy to monitor, such as a membership drive, others will not be able to be evaluated until after the event. Collect copies of press clippings or media coverage, records of attendances at functions or competitions and any feedback your group receives whether it’s positive or negative.

Ways to market your club

• Electronic e.g. electronic newsletters, website.
• Newsletters.
• Competitions.
• Advertising.
• Functions.
• Sponsorships.

Example marketing plan for a junior club open day

Marketing objective: To recruit 20 junior members by 10 December.

Total cost = $152.50

Actual memberships gained:
22 new members each @ $50 recruited = $1,100
Net profit for club $1,100 - $152.50 = $947.50
Developing a detailed marketing plan

A detailed marketing plan for a larger club or association would need to include further information such as the following:

Situational analysis – this contains information on the organisation, an analysis of the customers, a description of the services currently being offered, an analysis of the competition and the external environment.

Opportunity analysis – this section utilises the information from the situational analysis and identifies opportunities that need to be addressed.

The Australian Sports Commission’s ‘Marketing and Promoting Sport and Recreation’ booklet provides further information on developing a detailed marketing plan.

Working with the media to promote your club

Focusing on the marketing tool of promotion, and one aspect that many people lack confidence in, is working with the media.

How to write a media release

Your club or group can communicate with the media through an invitation alerting the media to a forthcoming event, such as the opening of new clubrooms or a media release about an event which is to take place or has taken place, such as a family day.

When producing a media release:

- make a point of finding out first names. As a general rule, give the person’s title first, followed by the name (e.g. the President, Joe Smith). Otherwise, follow the style of the newspaper or magazine for which you are writing. Check the spelling. Don’t feel embarrassed about asking a person to spell his or her name;
- use simple language;
- check the media deadlines. It is useless if it arrives late;
- ensure the release is typed or word processed – double spaced, with wide margins. Use only one side of the paper;
- provide photographs, or present opportunities for photographs;
- put the name of your club at the top to the release. The wording ‘media release’ should be prominently displayed; and
- supply the name, address and telephone number of a club person to contact for further information. If the contact number is a place of work, it is common courtesy to inform the company that there could be calls from the media.

A good media release will answer six questions concerning the event:

Remember!

Many organisations make the mistake of spending a lot of time and money on conducting promotions to recruit new members and forget about retaining current members. Developing marketing strategies to improve the basic product or services the club/group provides, the attitudes of volunteers or staff towards members or customers and the standard of facilities may be less expensive and more effective in the long-term.
